WINDHAM - With evidence collected earlier this year showing widespread PCB contamination at the former Keddy Mill in South Windham, the state is turning up the heat on the mill's owner to clean up the site.

According to Jean Firth, Brownfields coordinator for the Maine Department of Environmental Protection, the state sent a letter Aug. 26 to the mill's owner - HRC-Village at Little Falls, LLC based in Portland - seeking clarity on the owner's willingness to voluntarily clean up the site. The owner has until Sept. 30 to respond to the DEP with a detailed mitigation plan.

If the company does not meet the Sept. 30 deadline, the state, Firth said, would move to clean up the site under authority given it by federal law. Any costs incurred by the state would be passed on to the mill's owner for repayment.
